SAN DIEGO — July 29, 2009 — KBM Facility Solutions, a leading national janitorial service company headquartered in San Diego, has received national awards for “Safety and Health Program of the Year” and “Training Program of the Year” at the 2009 Annual (OS1®) User Symposium Awards in Savannah, Georgia, according to Maureen Gray, president of KBM Facility Solutions.

Gray said that KBM was nominated for a total of seven categories, including Safety and Health Program of the Year, Cleaning Program of the Year, Training Program of the Year, Communications, Environmental Program, Peer Influence, and Innovation, a joint nomination with The Boeing Company’s Electrical Relocations Project.

Operating System One (OS1)® is the world’s only 100 percent sustainable cleaning program that is scientifically verified. (OS1®) transforms custodial programs through in-depth training, simplicity, safety, reallocation of labor, cleaning frequencies, automation and environmental stewardship in all facets of the operation. (OS1)® is recognized as the leader in sustainable cleaning processes and is the only organization to date that has obtained best practices benchmarks and scientifically verified statistics for a cleaning process. By focusing on these key factors KBM, which has employed the (OS1®) methodology since 1998, is able to efficiently reduce many problems associated with traditional custodial operations.

The (OS1®) system is employed by some of the largest and most prestigious universities and corporations in the world including, University of Texas, the Boeing

Co., University of North Carolina, QUALCOMM, Lockheed Martin's - Sandia National Laboratories, Northrop Grumman Space Technologies, Intuit and the University of Massachusetts. The (OS1) system has also been scientifically measured by independent studies to verify its effectiveness and impact on health and safety.

Gray founded KBM Facility Solutions as Kleenhouse Maid Service in 1981, armed with only a small amount of capital, a briefcase, rented office space, and the services of six housekeepers. Eventually, she sold the maid service, and concentrated solely on providing contract commercial janitorial service, over the years added a specialized floor care division, a construction and tenant improvement division, and a building security division (which it sold in 2005). Today, KBM is one of the largest woman-owned businesses headquartered San Diego, with over 500 employees. The company has been named one of the Best Places to Work by the San Diego Business Journal.
